Paper, Asking for New Trial for Convicted Slayer, Contains 'Dynamite,' Says Attorney.

C. R. Buckley, a local taxicab driver, who drove Frank B. DuPre to Chattanooga, after the latter had shot and killed Irby C. Walker, Pinkerton operative, December 15 of last year, entered a plea of guilty to harboring and helping DuPre to escape in Fulton county superior court Monday morning. He was sentenced to serve twelve months on the state prison farm at Milledgeville by Judge John D.

This plea came as a distinct surprise to the state, as he had retracted his first confession of his part in the affair, when he was put on the witness stand during the trial of Jack J. Worth, also indicted as an accessory after the fact to the murder of Walker. Samuel Hewlett, attorney for Buckley, was present at the time the plea was DuPre was convicted of the murder of Walker by a jury in the Fulton superior court and was given the ing an accessory after the murder and on the state farm.

Mathewal of Macon, who presided in the trial of DuPre, will hear the motion in that case next Saturday.

Solicitor General John A. Boykin stated that as yet he had not received' from H. A. Allen, attorney for Du-Pres, his amended motion, and therefore flid not known upon what additional grounds he was asking for a new trial. Attorney Allen refused to discuss the case further than to say that the new motion would contain

AGED MINISTER AIDS.

Responding Monday morning, at the chamber of commerce, to Sunday's call for fresh workers for the five-way campaign, was an elderly minister. He said that he had been retired for several years and welcomed this opportunity to again do some service for his fellowmen. He said that he could not begin work soliciting from others until he had made his own sub scription, which was for $25. Commenting on this incident W. M. Brownlee, director-general of the campaign, said: "This is just one of many in stances of how the five-way campaign is arousing the social consciousness of Atlanta. More has been accomplished in this direction through the five-way campaign than in any other movement here-tofore. The appeal of these socialservice agencies is one that touches the hearts of all public-spirited men and women, and those whom it reaches can not fail to respond in some measure at least."

Rapid progress toward an early conclusion of the five-way campaign was indicated at Monday's meeting of workers and leaders. Four hundred and seventy-four new subscribers, whose gifts totaled $10,785.25, were reported by the division generals as the result of Sunday's and Monday Between 200 and 300 Boys morning's efforts. Decision Establishes Supremacy of I. C. C. in Regulating Matters Pertaining to Railroads.

Washington, February 27 .- The suremacy of the interstate commerce mission over state utilities commisions and similar state bodies in matters pertaining to the regulation of railroads has been established by the decision of the United States supreme court in the Wisconsin rate case.

The court, in an unanimous decision handed down Monday, declared that states cannot establish freight or passenger rates which interfere with interstate commerce, and cannot establish rates within a state which are discriminatory.

The spirit of the decision is contained in the declaration that "commerce is a unit and does not stop at state lines."

Washington, February 27.—The house is preparing to side-step the soldier bonus issue.

This will be done, best information indicates, by delaying the bill until the government's financial situation has improved.

The alternative is to report out a bill containing no provision for raising revenue, a course to which the president has said he is unalterably opposed. The effect of this procedure likewise would be to impose delay.

The ways and means committee, meeting Tuesday, will again endeavor to reach a decision on what is to be done. Technically, the question before the committee is the acceptance of the subcommittee's report rejecting

Washington, February 27 .- Prosecution of employment agencies which are "exploiting the people and preying upon the unemployed" in connecting with prospective operations at the Muscle Shoals, Ala., power and nitrate projects, was recommended today by Major General Beach, chief of army engineers, in a letter to Francis I. Jones, director general of the United States employment service of the department of labor.

The letter of General Beach was in reply to a communication from Director Jones inclosing copies of advertisements appearing in the press throughout the country stating that there was possibility of employment for a large number of industrial workers at Muscle Shoals in the very near future and soliciting an enrollment fee of $1. on of employment agencies which irector Jones declared that from information in possession of his ice there was no basis in fact such advertisements and express-the belief that measures should taken at once to inform the pub-was-required.

In his reply General Beach declared that all government operations in the vicinity of Muscle Shoals had been closed down for almost a year and there was no telling when work would be resumed.

"It is not possible at this date," said General Beach, "to state whether the work will be again taken up by the United States or whether it will be assigned to private parties. The latter are certainly not taking steps in the present uncertainty to secure labor, neither is the government which has its own agencies and methods."

General Beach suggested that the General Beach suggested that the most energetic measures be taken at once to inform the public of the true facts of the situation, and suggested that the matter be presented to the department of justice with a view to prosecution if it were found that a prosecution would hold under the circumstances.

The matter has not yet been formally called to the attention of the department of justice, it was indicated tonight, and officials declined to comment on the situation.

The above views show the scale on which "moonshine" is being manufactured in the territory surrounding Savannah. These flashlight photographs were made by a representative of The Savannah Morning News, Saturday night, after the officers had raided three large stills.

While the "mobile squads" from Washington have been busy along the Savannah coast in their campaign to head off the inflow of red liquor and ransacking the city for caches of the concealed liquors to be got out by rail or rubber tire, in trunks or barrels or crates, the state enforcement officers have been skirting the marshes and islands and tearing up "white lightning" factories. In the week ending yesterday twenty-four stills for the making of "shine" had been found and destroyed by the men under J. W. constitutionality of the woman's suffrage, or nineteenth amendment, was sustained today by the supreme court in a unanimous decision rendered by Justice Brandies.

Justice Brandies.

The challenge came from the state of Maryland, where Oscar Leser and others sought to prevent the registration of two women as qualified voters in Baltimore. Leser and his associates contended that the constitution of Maryland limited suffrage to men: that the legislature of Maryland had refused to ratify the woman's suffrage amendment, and that the amendment had not become a part of the tederal constitution. The Maryland state courts sustained the amendment.

Suggestion Overruled.

The suggestion that seven of the 36 states which ratified the nineteenth amendment had provisions in their state constitutions which prohibited the legislatures from ratifying, could not be entertained, the court stated, because the state legislatures derived their power in such matters from the tederal constitution which "transcends any limitations sought to be imposed by the people of a state."

The remaining objection, that the ratifying resolutions of Tennessee and West Virginit were inoperative, because adopted in violation of legislative procedure in those states may have been rendered 'immaterial," the court declared, by the subsequent ratification of the amendment by Connecticut and Vermont. The contention was disposed of, however, on a broader ground, the court stated, adding that the secretary of state having issued a proclamation of the ratification of the amendment by the legislative of the amendment by the legislativ adding that the secretary of state having issued a proclamation of the ratification of the amendment by the legislatures of 36 states, the amendment to all intents and purposes had become a part of the constitution. As Tennessee and West Virginia had power to ratify and had officially notified the secretary of state that they had done so their section was binding were done so, their action was binding upon the secretary, and upon being certified by that official had become conclusive

The court announced in disposing of the case, which had been brough on appeal on a writ of error, that it granted the petition of the parties for a writ of certiorari, but the de-cision today so thoroughly disposed of the objections urged, there seemed in the opinion of court officials, no probability that any argument could be presented which would cause the court to change its views.

Another attack upon women's suf-frage was disposed of by the court today, in an opinion handed down by Justice Brandeis. It came from the courts of the District of Columbia, Taft thought "conference between the interstate commerce commission and the state commissions may dispense with the necessity for any rigid federal order as to the intrastate rates, and leaves to the state commissions power to deal with them and increase them or reduce them in their discretion." James A. Perry, member of the state railroad commission, was asked by The Constitution for an opinion on the rul-ing of the supreme court in regard to the Wisconsin case. Mr. Perry's state-the sales tax as a means of raising the revenue. It was everywhere conceded that the sales tax is dead.

Representative Mondell, of Wyoming, republican leader, said Tuesday he thought it might be well to postpone the bonus bill. Mondell's opinion carried added weight because he had just visited the white house with Representative Fordney, of Michigan, chairman of the ways and means committee, to confer with the president.

"The problem of meeting the payments is a trying one," said Mondell, "as most of the suggestions for obtaining the money have not met with general approval. We are still hoping for some gap between expenditures and income. If the general conditions of the country improve, we have every reason to believe that the government's income, in the not far distant future, will increase under the revenue law.

"In the near future, also, we can secure funds through the sale of foreign securities. Taking that into consideration, it would not be such an extraordinary thing at this time if congress felt that it was not called upon to make all the provisions needed for the purpose of meeting all the demands on the treasury for adjusted compensation.

"Congress, at least the house, will in my opinion, pass the bonus bill. My own motion is, since it is well understood that the house will pass the legilsation, it might well be the part of wisdom not to press the matter for immediate consideration, as the situation in the near future will clear up.

Dr. Elam F. Dempsey, servitary of the education department of the North Georgia conference, introduced Jolonel Reagan, of the flying squadron, whose address was illustrated with figures showing the dry laws never have raised but always effected a reduction in taxes. Mayor Key, who was to have presided at the meetings Monday afternoon and night, was unavoidably detained, Dr. Dempsey acting in his stead, In his introduction, the principal speaker, Dr. Dempsey, told of the purposes of the flying squadron, and also analyzed the situation of Atlanta with regard to the gross lack of respect for enforcement of its laws.

"No, my fellow citizens, every man and woman who has been lax in observing the law, or guiltily silent and indifferent when it has been violated by others, or through resentment against the law because it has worked personal discomfort, or through maudlin sentimentalism in regard to punishment of red-handed criminals has given comfort to the criminal and law-

More than that, decent, law-abiding citizens, who have not been aggressive in the championship of law and courageously outspoken in their opposition to lawlessness, had their fingers, too, on that trigger. This meeting and the succeeding meetings of the series give voice to the martyred blood of Policeman Travis in its cry for justice, in its cry for obedience to the law, in its cry for the arrest, of the criminal and the punishment of crime in our city, in our state decision of the court, outlined the history of federal railroad regulation.

The new measure imposed an affirmative duty on the interstate commerce commission to fix rates and to take other important steps to maintain adequate railway service for the people of the United States. This is expressly declared to be one of the purposes of the bill."

Judge Taft pointed out that rates within the various states play an important part in the maintenance of an adequate national railroad system. that!" he declared, passionately snapping his finger.

He then quoted City Building Inspector Bowen as saying that he had studied the proposed ordinance, and that it puzzled him, adding that his decisions after the passage of ordinance could be appealed endlessly.

Judge Kontz said that the reports that the Atlanta realty board as a whole favored the plan is false, and declared that he understands that Edward Peters, Fitshugh Knox, M. L. Thrower, W. S. Ansley, J. H. Ewing and Oscar Mills, members of the board, are opposed to the passage of the proposed ordinance.

Praise for Atlanta.

He laughed at the argument presented by the planning commission that the plan would work for better recreation and education; stating that there is no community in the country which is growing more rapidly as an which is growing more rapidly as an educational center; and that the entire south is turning towards Atlanta as a place to send their sons and daughters for education.

"I don't think Atlanta is a sick town," he said, "and yet it is proposed to dope us with this and that as though we were in great need of an apothecary. It is merely fixing up a nostrum which will kill a healthy city.

"They say the plan will make At-"They say the plan will make At-lanta beautiful town to live in. I sup-pose they will give men, who ordinarily wont work, atomizers and make them stand on the street corners and sprinkle pedestrians with perfume."

Regrets at Decatur.
Judge Kontz then told how long ago
L. P. Grant, purchasing agent for the Georgia railroad, had proposed Decatur, Ga., as the terminus of that road. He said the citizens of that town refused to give the right of way to the road for a terminus, claiming that the smoke of the engines would soil the shirts and clothes of the people, and keep them awake at night.
However, he said, that Mr. Grant got Regrets at Decatur.

the right of way, on the grounds that the terminus be built elsewhere. "The result," said Judge Kontz, "was that the terminus was established in Marthasville, and Decatur has since had cause to regret its fastidious taste for beauty. What we want in this town are factories, stores, business buildings, and jobs for workers.

"I think that it is an outrageous shame, too, that when we have such good architects and engineers we must go to other states to get men to make a soning plan for Atlanta. The consultant, I understand, receives approximately $6,000 yearly to tell us what to do. Much money has been spent on the plan and I believe $15,000 has been appropriated for the commission's 1922 expenses.

"Now if the plan is adopted, the "Now if the plan is adopted, the men who have devised it, and they are good men, will fold their tents like the Arabs and go away. Then the authority under the zoning law will be centered in the hands of a committee of men named by ward politicians at city hall. And this committee will be able to do anything to your property they wish. Overnight they will be able to change the value of your property from $100 a foot to $1,500, and vice versa. How much money wouldn't people pay to get on such a powerful committee?"

"Real Panic" Predicted.

He then told of the surprise expressed by the proponents of the plan at the first hearing before the ordinance committee that there was so little epposition to the plan. "But now," declared Judge Kontz, "the proponents are in a panic because of a few firececkers which were set off ponents are in a panic because of a few firecrackers which were set off, and are revising the system. They will be in a real panic when we begin to aim our 42's at them."

Judge Kontz quoted some building data in answer to the contention that the plan should be adopted because Atlanta needs a systematic zoning plan which would result in the in-crease in the prosperity of Atlanta. crease in the prosperity of Atlanta. The facts showed that Atlanta is practically leading all other southern cities in building development, and he further declared that a zoning plan may suit an old city but that Atmay suit an old city, but that At-lanta, a young and thriving and pros-

A weak link in the sales system

DID you ever picture to yourself, one by one, your "channels of trade"?

They are all human—those men who touch or handle or steer your goods on their way from factory to consumer. Their likes or dislikes are what make your business good or bad.

If they fail to understand the "why" of your policies and methods, then their dislikes are going to build up walls of opposition.

A good printer should be a link in your sales system. Print your messages and explanations of policy. Mail them to your customers before and between your salesmen's calls. Good printed matter is a low-cost insurance against loss of sales through ignorance of the real merit of your goods or unjustified dislike of your policy. Better printing and better use of it means better business.

AT BAY ON THE BONUS.

Irrespective of the principle in volved in the soldier bonus question, the republican administration and party leaders are plainly at bay on that issue.

Latest Washington dispatches announce that Hanford MacNider. national commander of the Ameri can Legion, and Dan Steck, chair man of its national legislative committee, have gone to the capital in person to prevent, if possible, delay in the enactment of the soldier bonus bill.

Also, says a dispatch, their first step will be to seek an audience with President Harding, to discuss the bonus situation with him; and the outcome of the conferenceassuming, of course, that the president will grant their request for an interview-is awaited with keen interest by the whole country.

It will be interesting, indeed, to note just what the president will say to the legion spokesmen-how he will attempt to harmonize his pre-election attitude toward the soldier bonus principle with his recent communication to congress

Interest in the prospective interview is further heightened by the fact that a few days ago Commander MacNider issued a public statement in which he undertook to lecture the president for reneging his campaign promises, expressed or implied, with reference to soldier compensation legislation, and in which he virtually accused the chief executive with "double crossing" the boys who fought the war.

The New York Globe has taken the legion commander severely to task for that passage in his statement in which "he charges the president 'first with commitment and then retraction."

"That, incidentally," says the Globe, "is both unfair and insolent, for Mr. Harding has been frankly opposed to the bonus since he became president." Right there is the point.

Granted that "Mr. Harding has been frankly opposed to the bonus since he became president," his attitude was certainly not one of frank opposition before he became president-while he was a candidate for the presidency on a platform that declared for a soldier bonus, and appealing for soldier votes, thousands of which he gained solely on the strength of his supposed position, and the position to which his party was committed, on the bonus question.

That is where the whole hitch comes in!

Certainly, Mr. Harding was not then "frankly opposed to the

He may have been secretly op posed to it, but not "frankly" so. If he was opposed to the bonus while a candidate he did not take the soldier boys into his confidence to the extent of letting them know what was in his heart. Conversely, he led them to believe that he was heartily in favor of the bonus, and they trusted him.

And that is why he is now in the embarrassing predicament from which he is likely to have more than a little difficulty in extricating himself and his party.

So it is probable that Presiden Harding is not looking forward with any great amount of pleasure to this prospective interview wita the official spokesmen for the soldiers. As for the republican party organization, it long ago should have learned the lesson expressed in the ancient aphorism about

POINTS TO BETTER TIMES.

We are reminded that farmers are now enjoying the pleasant sensation of being carried up on an ascending market as they recently were carried down by a falling one, which sent shivers up and down their spines. This happy memorandum comes from the New York Times which sees the farming industry in America approaching normalcy and describes a betterment of general economic conand partly the effect of this recovery in agriculture.

In the report of Eugene Meyer, Jr., director of the War Finance corporation, especial cheer and significance is derived from the report that general agricultural conditions are improving. He says: "Within four months corn ha isen in price from 20 to 40 cents. brings 80c or more when sold in the form of pork. Cattle are no nger sacrificed in a demoralized market, but are being fattened on cheap grains, which also are in in-creasing demand for human food. Cotton is moving more freely than last year, and at better prices, the planters' co-operative marketing bilizing influence. These are only a few of the leading signs that the industry which produces the greatost amount of new wealth each year, but which has suffered more than any other, and undeservedly, is reviving as the country itself revives. "This is a case where all things work together for good. Our domestic conditions could not improve if foreign affairs also were not improving. Lack of buying power abroad has been the chief cause of the fall of our farm prices for goods of which was exported in 1921, 19,276,223 tons. That was an inrease of 30 per cent over 1920. Evidently there was no lack of demand for our products, and that makes the fall in prices all the more remarkable. The farmers have though their grievance to be that the banks compelled them to liquidate. But if they had received all the banking railef they have asked, they would still have suffered from undersell-ing by competitive and more distressed farmers. While our wheat was falling 19 cents in Liverpool, Manitoba wheat fell 58 cents, Argen-tine wheat 46 cents and Australian

"The farmers are being carried up on the ascending market as they. were carried down by the falling market. The improvement in their condition reacts on all other condi-As the farmers pay their debts the banks are more liquid. As the farmers sell their crops the railways move them, and carry back the goods the farmers are able to buy in larger quantities. If the farms, banks and railways improve their condition together, nothing can prevent their revival from stimulating all other industries. The solidarity of all classes throughout the world is the lesson from the betterment of the condition of our farmers, in manner so surprising to them."

All of this is exceedingly encouraging. It is an index figure that clearly points to better times.

Coroner Vowinkle would not ston at doing away with his own job alone, but he would have the office of coroner abolished in every county in the United States for the reason, he says, that it represents a useless drain upon the resources of the people-expenditure without a full measure of compensation in public service. "Coroner's are unnecessary," he declared in a public statement.

"Their work," he went on to say, can be done by the department of health in every community;" and he added that "coroner's investigations never reveal anything that could not be found out other

Whether or not this view is sound, it represents, at any rate, the opinion of a man who has been long enough "in the service" to know what he is talking about; for Mr. Vowinkle, says a Syracuse dispatch, "was elected coroner of Oswego county, New York, in 1888 for a three-year term and has been re-elected and re-elected until the present, making him the oldest coroner in the United States in

The moment we get well into som great forest, then does the cling of artificiality loosen, and before we know we find ourselves race to face with ourselves as we are.

I cited her to the modern city's central organization that would hear and verify her strong that would hear and verify her should never be termed a prattler, but rather a thoughtful youngster. That is the kind of story I most often hear. Out at Ormewood court 'on the hilltop' the conditions are often made favorable, without the least show of inquisitiveness, to give me a child's story from his or her me a child's story from his or her me a child's story from his or her own lips. My own home is not at the trip of the conditions of the pring and semi-spring days are unsurpassed.

It was under such conditions that I took a rustic seat there the other evening. Once again that great old colonial house for the instant seemed deserted. Oh, I know, the days are getting longer, and the supper hour now comes even before sunset. But just then a slender little girl walked out of the open door, glanced upward at the tall colonades, down the long shelftered front porch and then spied me on the side of the hill. "Hep" is the word of greeting at Ormewood court, and she said it as she ran down the slope and sat begide me. But the story of a child has another sort of appeal. To a large extent there is missing the element of "what might have been." The inexperienced young mother education was sadly neglected. The public school where she absorbed geography and grammar didn't teach her the most important thing in life—how to care for a baby. That is where on one score.

The young mother has three big lesons to learn, and the sooner she learns them the better. The first lesson is that a nursing mother should eat any thing and everything on the ordinary bill of fare, and avoid nothing what-ever, sweet or sour, that ordinarily agrees with her. In the next place, she must learn that it is absolute essential for her to have one hour the open air every day in the year, she wishes to make a success of the greatest job a woman ever tackled. "This is quite a joke, and is an effort on the part or the old group of colored leaders, using a few white men as dummies, to get restored to their hands the patronage in Georgia, before all the appointments have been made. It has particular reference to the Atlanta postoffice.

"No restraining order has been granted, but a hearing has been ordered for March 18, at which time I anticipate the petition will be dismissed. This is not the first time that this has been brought up. The petition was prepared sometime ago and submitted to a prominent Atlanta law firm who asked for a retainer fee, which was apparently beyond the means of these people to raise, or at least some of them were unwilling to put up the money, hence nothing came carried over until 10 o'clock Monday.

The Georgia law requires that owners of land erect fences to protect gressively for the farmer co-operative marketing movement and in a bulletin today urges particularly that the their crops from straying cattle, and the defendants contend that in a no-fence district of the state the insignifisweet potato growers of the south enter at once into such an organization so that uniformity in sizes, pack-ing, and intelligent marketing shall make the crop one of the money prod-ucts of the section. It carries the problems.

The farmer co-operative movement is developing rapidly. The co-operative associations are now handling practically every farm product but have not reached the point yet where they handle the largest part of any product. The cotton farmers of Arizona. Oklahoma, Texas and Arkansas are organized now to dispose of most of the crop of those states. The cotton farmers in other states are pretty of the crop of those states. The cotton farmers in other states are pretty well organized, also they are rapidly organizing in Georgia. It is said Florida's organized farmers handle 35 per cent of the orange and grapefruit crops and organized farmers in Cali-forpia hadle 76 per cent of similar fruits.

The apple crop of the northwest and of New York state will be sold largely through co-operative organizations. The tobacco farmers of Kentucky, North Carolina and South Carolina are more than 50 per cent organized. The Georgia peach crop will be sold through a co-operative organization. Raisins, prunes, apricots, almonds, walnuts, potatoes, caborganization. Raisins, prunes, apri-cots, almonds, walnuts, potatoes, cabbage, onions, celery and lettuce will be put on the market by the farmers and now the farmers have organized for the handling of live stock and are rapidly getting control of the commission markets.

The department of agriculture is making a survey now to determine how many farmers are represented in co-operative organizations and to what extent the total crops are thus handled. The result of the survey will be surprising to those who are not acquainted with this development and it is insisted that right now is more reason for co-operation and the movement is in a stronger position

The thought, however, that the cooperative movement is going to wipe out all middlemen and eliminate all profits between the producer and con-sumer is not being justified," suggest-ed a department official. "There will be savings but not so rapidly as s been suggested.

"The whole movement must succeed or fail in competition with other methods of distribution. It is just one method. If it can effect savings for the producer and consumer then it will succeed. If it cannot then it should not succeed. It cannot then it should not succeed. It must be con-sidered in that light and strongly and soundly organized, for the path of co-operation is stream with wrecks of poorly organized groups of farmers.

DISTRICT MANAGER METROPOLITAN BUILDING OFFERED FOR LOAN

Mscow, February 27.—(By the Associated Press.)—The soviet delegation to Genoa will carry instructions to grant all concessions demanded, provided a big reconstruction loan can be obtained. If this loan cannot be arranged, then, from the Russian point of view, the conference has only the moral value of recognition of the present government.

The basic reason for this attitude is the famine. It is only within the last few weeks that the leaders of the soviet have realized just how desperate is the food situation. So long as the famine starves to death the peasants and the remaining bourgeois, though it be on a scale of millions, the soviet leaders are untouched and rather indifferent.

But the famine now is slowly and surely encircling their stronghold—Moscow—and soviet representatives sent to every part of Russia for food, report there is less and less to be had, that beginning with March the favored army will begin to starve, and that each succeeding month will be worse until July, when harvests, morror or less scant, may relieve the situation.

The frightened attitude of the soviet is shown by its daily changing attitude towards the American relief administration. Poles came down on the Jewish sector of the village and slaughtered almost every Jew there. "Surely Indian massacres on your western frontiers a century ago were less horrible than the massacre of Jews that I witnessed in Poland," was the statment Monday of a Russian girl, Miss Emily Berg, 468 North Boulevard, who recently came to America from Littuania.

Miss Berg is a charming Jewish girl, and is the sister of Henry Berg, of the Pollock & Berg Co., in this city. In her career of varied adventure, she witnessed the downfall of the Romanoffs in the Russian revolution, she saw pogroms in Poland, and any amount of suffering throughout her native land. Her brother made a trip a short time ago to bring her to American, in order, as she expressed it; that she might "forget the suffering over there."

In a room filled with mementos of her native land, but far from its tragedies and terrors, Miss Berg described the pogroms as she had seen and the dark shadows of suffering that have fallen on her people in eastern and central Europe. She told of 300,000 orphans and 400,000 refugees who are living in the midst of misery and destitution.

"I had seen all manner of suffering in the Russian revolution when I was a student in Petrograd. I endured all manner of wretched conditions, hunger and the ever present fear of death. But in the revolution we all suffered, Jew and Gentile alike, in the cause of liberty. But in Poland only the Jew had to suffer, not for any cause, merely for the brutal pleasure of a heartless people."

At the present time Miss Berg is a student in the Southern Business college and will probably remain in America.

of seven White trucks.

R. L. Jett, superintendent of the municipal garage, who had recommended purchase of Armleder trucks for the construction department, was questioned by Mayor Key as to why he had recommended the Armleder when the price was about $140 higher than quotations for the machine a year ago. Mr. Jett said he was unfamiliar with last year's prices.

Numerous truck dealers were represented at the hearing, and several of them told the mayor their bids had not received the proper consideration. This was denied by the purchasing agent, J. N. Landers, who declared that every bid was given the most careful attention.

Proposed purchase of four Armleder trucks for the construction department was approved by city council but was turned down by the aldermanic board.

Judge Thomas has presided in emergency division of the Sheld in number of times and is held in high esteem by members of the Atlanta bar. A heavy docket will be prepared for trial that week, it was stated in the office of Solicitor-General John A. Boykin.

Sally hesitated, imperceptibly:
Could see let the maliciously gleeful
Pats see her make a fool of herself with this man who probably couldn't dance at all? She gianced up at him and made a swift decision. After all, she knew that Keith had wanted to spend the evening with her; why flatter Pats by being jealous of her?

It took but a moment to show her one of her mistakes. Scal Calhoun could dance, and dance remarkably well. He laughed at the surprise that opened her eyes as he dropped into a curious, shiffling step that almost caught her napping.

"Thought I was pure boob because I come out of the west, didn't you?" he laughed. "Or wasn't I worth your thinking about?"

Even as she answered him Sally was making a vow never to judge a person what was it—somebody—"

"H'lo, Sally," Pats' voice called lightly as she danced past and Cal-houn's quick eyes caught the flush that stained Sally's cheeks as she nodded to the girl and to Gilbert.

"Why, that's funny — do you know—" he broke off short, staring after them. Sally looked up wonder-

"Do I know them?" she finished for him. "Yes, of course; they're both great friends of mine." "Both?" he repeated incredulously. "Do you mean that that man—"

There was a inoment's heavy, sig-nificant silence, as he stared down at her, and she, puzzled, met his eyes unflinchingly. Then Calhoun broke it, saying:

"Sorry I startled you; that chap

"Yes?" Sally's voice was silky. "And this man—who is he?"
"I can't tell you his name, after the introduction I've given him," laughed Calhoun. "I met him abroad when I—well, I was just loafing around and ran into him. He was mixed up in a lot of queer deals over there, and since I came back I've heard the same of the meet him."

"No, probably not," agreed Sally. They returned to their table as the music stopped, and Sally refused to look toward the table where Keith Gilbert and Pats were laughing and talking together. She rather expected Keith to come over to her when the music began again, but he danced again with Patricia, and they left immediately afterward, just as the midnight show was beginning. She wondered where they would go. Probably the crowd was gathered somewhere; perhaps they'd all drive out to one of the country clubs; she could imagine them gathered about a great fireplace, Pats sitting on the arm of Keith's chair, no doubt, gazing at him admiringly. Sally turned hot with jealousy—would he laugh up at Pats as he so often did at her, with that curious expression in his hazel eyes that made her feel hot and then shivery in the same instant?

Somebody would start the phonograph, perhaps, and Keith would sing, in the lazy, deep voice that never failed to stir Sally so. "I'm sorry—but I really must go; I'm quite worn out," she found herself saying to Barbara. She felt that she would begin to laugh and cry hysterically if she couldn't be alone.

A Wife on Leave.

Who Who and What's Happened?
Richard Brabant, a successful young lawyer, has suggested a year's leav of absance for his bored wife, Sally, hoping that she will learn enough of life to become less a butterfly and more a helpmate. She begins by meeting a childhood friend,
Keith Gilbert, always labeled "dangerous." and while on her way to tea with Barbara Lane, an old-frashioned wife, and Patricia Loring, a modern flapper, who is out to capture Gilbert, and is surprised when, at a big costume ball, she meets Sally with him and

All about them were women dressed as Sally would have been if Keith Gilbert had been her escort. Her black frock was undeniably smart and her little hat had arrived from Paris only a few days before, yet she felt uncomfortable because she was not in evening clothes. She looked long at Barbara, whose face was beaming; Barbara, who had laundered her dainty blouse herself, cleaned her own gloves and was carefully cherishing the wilt ing bouquet of violets she had bought on the way to Sally's—yet who was so happy.

idly, her thoughts on Keith Gilbert— wondering what new diversion he would have to offer her on the mor-row. His devotion made a satisfactory background for her thoughts. Then suddenly she gripped her hands till the nails cut her delicate, scented flesh.

Keith Gilbert was sitting just across the floor from her, his eyes intently fixed on his companion. The girl turned her head, running a slim hand up through her black, bobbed hair. Sally leaned back, her throat contracting.

up through her black, bodded hair. Sally leaned back, her throat contracting. The girl to whom he was devoting himself was Pats Loring.

Unreasoning anger swept over Sally. Keith Gilbert had never told her that he did not go out with other women when she could not be with him: in fact, there had been so few evenings when they were not together that those few had not been worth mentioning, and he had always contrived to let her know where he was. How dared he go out with Pats, who had tried so hard to get him, and would feel that this was a distinct victory? They began to dance; Sally, flinching, watched Pats' arm slip around his neck, saw her fluffy hair brush against his lips, and watched him smile when the girl tilted her head back and laughed up at him.

They would see her—see her with these quiely dressed people, and Pats would be amused. She would laugh at the thought of Sally's being a wallflower, sitting on the side lines with

WHAT'S WHAT By Helen Decie

The Welsh in America are not so numerous as the Irish, but they, too, cling with Celtic romanticism to many of the customs of their ancestral land. The national fete of Wales is St. David's day, March I. While it is not so widely celebrated as Ireland's holiday, some two weeks later, the Welsh, and those descended from Cymric forefathers, always take pride in keeping St. David's day—or "Taffy's day."

Since the Welsh, unlike the Irish, became politically British long ago, it is not easy to make a distinctively national celebration of the day. Nor does the emblem of Wales—the leek, which is a sort of green onion—lend itself kindly to decorative purposes, although it is fine in Welsh soup and Taffy's day in Welsh fashion will have plenty of material in the imperishable national music, songs and recitals after the manner of the "Eisteddfod." Quaint Welsh costumes may be worn at a dinner or supper served in accordance with Welsh traditions.

Paris Combines Brown With Orange in a Way That Softons the One and Gives Life to the Other, and Produces Charm of Color,

We speak with considerable glib ness concerning "new" colors.

We take it for granted that twice a season, anyway, a "new" color will be added to the spectrum of fashion.

Now there was once a time when the dyeing business was in its infancy, when it was possible to produce, if not a new color, at least a new shade. With the perfecting of analine dyes magenta, named after the famous French victory, seemed to strike an entirely new notes in color. To most persons far from pleasant,

We make no demands for real novelty when we seek new colors nowadays. Apparently all we need is to be told that the color is new. Then it we see it repeated frequently enough in the dressmakers' and milliners' shops, and become familiar with it as we do an old tune revived in a new revision correct. we do an old time revived in a new musical comedy we are content. Recently when some designers in this country promised a new color at an exhibition of new clothes, we waited with some interest. Then came the new dandelion shade, a col-or which is certainly quite ancient or which is certainly quite ancient or which is certainly quite ancient among the flowers, since it is not hard to believe that the dandelion was a pest in the Garden of Eden. ## ACTRESS TELLS SECRET

Tells How to Darken Gray Hair With

Joicey Williams, the well-known American actress, recently made the following statement about gray hair and how to darken it, with a homemade mixture:

made mixture:

"Anyone can prepare a simple mixture at home that will gradually darken gray, streaked or faded hair, and make it soft and glossy. To a half-pint of water add I ounce of bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound, and 1-4 ounce of glycerine.

These ingredients can be bought at any drug store at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. This will make a gray-haired person look twenty years younger. It does not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off"—(adv.)

"Oh, what a horrid little beast I have been!" Phyllis cried impetuously. "Nursing a grudge all these years. What can you think of me?"

"Oh, gladly!" Phyllis cried.
They had reached the foot of the library door opened and a young man appeared with a sheaf of papers in his band. He bowed elightly and was passing on when Mrs. Throckmorten stopped him with a gesture.

"My dear, this is Mr. Rider, your grandfather's secretary. Miss Calloun."

Rider started, and a gleam of mazement showed in his eyes before they dropped deferentially. Phyllis held out her hand and smiled sweetly. "How do you do, Mr. Rider?"

He bowed low over her hand and murmured something in an udertone.

murmured something in an udertone. There was something sinister about the man's very vagueness and neutrality and Phyllis shuddered as she followed her hostess up the stair.

That evening, as Phyllis was alone in the library, her eyes were drawn insensibly to the window at the right of the safe and a sudden chill struck to her heart. Had she imagined it, or had a face been pressed for a moment against the pane? Well in shadow with the tall winged chair protecting her face from the revealing glow of the hearth and in her dark gown, she knew that her presence would not be distinguished in the gloom of the room, yet instinctively she shrank back.

It really seemed as if a moving blur were there just above the sill of the windows, a patch of grayish white against the dense blackness. Then, before her eyes, the face materialized again. It seemed to her that an ungloved hand moved along the sill. The next instant it had disappeared.

She rose and darted to the window The man might be waiting still just outside, or Rider himself might discover her, but she dared not think of that. The window was heavy, and creaked alarmingly as her straining arms raised it, but she did not pause to glance behind the strain which arms raised it, but she did not pause to glance behind but. A twisted wisp of white in the bare ivy vine which clambered over the ledge caught her eye and seizing it she sped back to the hearth. It was a single sheet of paper evidently torn from a natebook and, smoothing it out with trembling fingers, she read the words it contained:

"Elegen o'clock. Tea house, Jap

ven o'clock. Tea house, Jap

"Fleven o clock. Tea house, Jap garden."
Phyllis hastily twisted it once more into a wad and darting to the window, thrust it back among the clinging strands of the vine. Then closing the window she hurried away.

At half-past ten the good-nights were said and Phyllis found herself alone in her room.

Wrapping herself in her cloak she to be downstairs and into the library. Raising the window Phyllis crept over the sill and dropped lightly to the ground below. Then, turning, she sped past the tennis courts, and entered the winding maze of the Japanese garden. At length she came upon an artificial pool spanned by a miniature high-arched bridge within a few feet of what Phyllis supposed to be the rear of the tea house. She crept beneath the arch, curling herself into as small "But there is Mrs. Throckmorten.

Why not go to her?" Phyllis paused in distress.

"Mrs. Trockmorten cannot be taken into our confidence," Gore-Pevensey asserted. "Until our complete mission has been accomplished she must know nothing."

"I don't know what to do." Phyllis turned troubled eyes from one to the other of them. "She may not welcome me to Grey castle! I have been ungracious in the past and she may think it strange that I should come now."

"Phyllis, will you take my word for it that you will be welcome?" Waddy asked "I've told you how well I knew to the conservation of the louse.

"I'm sorry, but the butler was prowled in galout," the saletary's voice replied suddenly from the stillness.

With one accord the two men turned and began pacing back and forth, taking together in low tones. At last they paused within a few feet of her and disappeared in the direction of the girl's ears which made her start and lean closer in breathiese excitement. The secretary questioned now, the other replied and then they stroiled around toward the front, of the tea house, out of earshot. Phyllis waited to hear no more, but creeping forth from her hiding place she file to a thicket of cedars, tore her way through and disappeared in the direction of the house.

CHAPTER VI.

An Unexpected Guest. Ippolito's dingy little restaurant was seldom crowded. It was too dull and somber for the average diner-out, too secluded and far from the beaten path secluded and far from the beaten path for the great floating population to discover, and only a select and seasoned coterie of epicures had learned that here were to be found the rarest vintages of Italian wines in the new world. Few, indeed, of these even, had found the open sesame to either of the tiny private dining rooms upstairs. Among the so anointed Waddy ranked high in favor and as he and Gore-Pevensey mounted the uarrow stairway on Sunday, Ippolito himself waited in the doorway of the private room to see that his guests were made comfotable.

"I wonder"—Gore-Pevensey drum-

"I wonder"—Gore-Pevensey drummed nervously on the table—"I wonder if she will come!"
"Phyllis? Of course, she'll be here.

That was the arrangement, wasn't it?"
"Hello, people!"
They whirled toawrd the door, but Gore-Pevensey was the first out of his

"I couldn't distinguish any more, or they turned and walked off around."

"I couldn't distinguish any more for they turned and walked off around the corner of the tea house, and I made my way back to the library window from which I climbed." Then Phyllis inquired as to Miss Kildare.

"Has no word of her been received at her hotel?" she asked.
"No." Waddy answered, "but her maid evidently left to join her; that is some comfort? She left word that her rooms were to be held undis-

"'Undisturbed?' Phyllis looked at Gore-Pevensey, who nodded. "They told me at the office that Miss Kildare's mail was to be held and her rooms unentered until her return. lis, after a pause.

"Nine thirty-four. But I say, Miss Calhoun, how are we three to arrange for a future meeting?"

"I arranged for that yesterday before I left town. You see, I couldn't tell what might occur suddenly at Grey Castle, which would make it necessary for me to get in town to communicate with you, so my friend, Evangeline Warder, who has the studio across the hall from me, has agreed to write to me every day. Should it be necessary for me to get to town I can tell Mrs. Throckmorten this note has summoned me. If you want to has summoned me. If you want to see me you can arrange with Miss Warder."

Meantime, below stairs the occupants of the little tables had thinned to a mere half dozen, and among them one who had come in just after Phyllis Calhoun had joined her party, still sat in solitary meditation over his coffee. He was a small man, almost emaciated-looking with a bald bulging forehead and deep-set, peering eyes, and Ippolito himself, shrewd as a judge as he was, eyed his new guest with puzzled curiosity. His small table faced the side door of the restaurant which opened into the hall leading to the private rooms above, taurant which opened into the hall leading to the private rooms above, and although he did not glance up, there was a perceptible movement of his narrow, bowed shoulders when Phyllis' trim figure passed the door alone and vanished into the street beyond. He made no move to follow her, and it was only when a second

At lunch time in Grey castle the next day, the butler entered, bearing a card.

"Mr. Rutherford Quade," read Mrs. Throckmorton, with a questioning glance at the secretary. "Perhaps you had best—?"

Waddy stared, his mouth agape and tingling with wrath mounting in a hot red tide to his forehead.

"What do you want?" he demanded.

"That which you brought to this country; which you and that girl between you have managed to conceal."

The thin voice became a shade more menacing. "Hand it over or tell me where it is, and Miss Kildare returns to her hotel; try to bluff it out and I shall be forced to the painful necessity of forcing one or the other of you to speak."

Waddy slowly gathered himself to shere until he could feel the muscles awell and tighten beneath his coat and a choking, blinding rage seized him.

Georgia Pulls Fine Rally in Second Half, But Falls Far Short - Mercer, Loafing, Halts Chattanooga's Title Hopes.

Two Georgia teams remain in the by Tech and Mercer. upper bracket of the Southern Interllegiate Basketball tournament after Monday's strenuosities. In the lower bracket are two outlander schools. Tonight Georgia Tech and Mercer will battle to see which represents the upper pracket in the final fray. soon as their combat is concluded Crimson of Alabama and the wonder team of the University of North Carolina will battle.

Basketball is a game of too many vagaries to make prophesying anything like a safe business, but from Monday's showings, it would seem that Josh Cody's men of Mercer will go to the finals to try to stem the mighty rush of the invading Tarheels.

Mercer played impressively in her victory over the University of Chattanooga. Georgia Tech did not awaken from her lethargy any too soon to stave off defeat at the hands of South Carolina. North Carolina won a brilliant and glorious victory over Georgia, despite the fact that the Chapel Hill contingent was outplayed in the last half. On the other hand, Alabama seemed stale and sluggish in its struggle with Tennessee and had to fight a back to the wall battle to win its way into the semi-finals. its way into the semi-finals.

their form in the first half against Georgia they should be able to beat anything in the tournament.
Still there are those who can see North Carolina falling by the way side this evening. The Alabama team, they point out, has suffered from its long layoff, caused by drawing a bye and being the recipient of a forfeited game.

Alabama's friends say that the close game with Tennessee was just what was needed to put the Crimson on edge to defeat North Carolina. All of that may be so.

The Alabama of the play hadn't been underway a minute before a goal had been scored. Rawson, Boney, Page Bennett and Clarke were all taking desperate shots. Many of them were sinking.

For a while it seemed that Georgia would close that tremendous gap and then Carmichael would get loose and whenever he fired the ball dropped through the hoops.

And every game was a thriller.
Unquestionably the greatest interst centered in the Georgia-North

Since the first day the Tarheels, a late entry, a sort of added starter, have been considered the real dark horse of the tournament, but all along the Georgia supporters have hoped and prayed that Georgia would return to its old basketball prowess.

At the outset of the same, it seemed

At the outset of the game, it seemed that the Red and Black was to be humiliated. North Carolina passed rings around the Georgians. At times the Bulldogs looked absolutely silly, so bewildered were they by the flashy stuff that the Tarheels seemed to possess in limitless quantities.

The Georgians remained firm and true to their five-man defense, which enabled Notth Carolina to keep the ball practically all the time and keep it generally in Georgia's territory.

Alt was not until the first half had ended that Georgia on the short end of the humiliating score of 20-6 that this defense was abandoned. When they came out for the second half, the Bulldogs had thrown caution to the winds. They forgot all about a five-man defense or any kind of a defense that was not included in an attack.

Went Out to Score. Went Out to Score.

Georgia went out to score points regardless, and did so. The final score tells the story. CHATTANOOGA 18. CHATTANOOGA 18.

There was little excitement to the Mercer-Chattanooga affray. From the jump Mercer took the lead and although the Chattanoogans played skillfully and brilliantly, it was apparent that they never had a look in.

Harmon, playing a roving guard for Mercer, was always unstoppable while Smith and Gamble were making the basket ring every time that the Baptists seemed to need points.

Redd, high scorer of the tournament, sent four more balls through the hoops to his credit and otherwise conducted himself as a high class athlete, but his most heroic efforts were not enough.

were not enough.

The Mercerites were relentless and when they trotted off the floor at the end of an easy game, it was apparent that they had been saving themselevs largely for the strenuosity of the semi-finals.

NORTH CAROLINA 33; GEORGIA 25.

GEORGIA 25.

Georgia looked pitiful in the first half of the Tarheel game. The brilliant Carolina passing had the Bulldogs bewildered. C. Carmichael and Green took the ball right from the Georgians time and time again and frequently when the Georgia five-man defense would herd itself under its own basket, the Carolinians would simply step back toward the center of the court and have one of these deadly accurate shooters make practical free throws.

It was in this way that Carolina ran up its immense first half lead of 20-6.

The Bablists playing against Chattanooga, a resourceful and technically skillful team, last night, had plenty in reserve and won about as it wanted to. That's how it looks. Mercer and North Carolina are favored to reach the finals, but anything in the world can happen.

Brilliant Assemblage.

A brilliant and numerous assemblage saw the third round of warfare yesterday. The night assemblage was particularly large and particularly brilliant. The Auditorium was filled with students of Tech and Georgia. In the afternoon, the Georgia cohorts had a fine time as South Carolina

Jackets and Alabama Frighten Supporters But Win In Long Run

University of Tennessee and South Carolina Fight Hard Against Big Odds—Crimson in Splendid Second Half Rally.

Georgia Tech and Alabama, favorites in the third round of the Monday afternoon frays in the collegiate basketball tournament, survived, but the survival was made possible by nitroglycerine, digitalis. and every other known stimulant after all hope had fled and the mourners had begun to give free play to their tear ducts.

Tech squeaked in a victory over South Carolina by 34-23, a score that looks more loosided than the contest really was, while Alabama was all but scared stiff by Tennessee, defeating the Volunteers 29-25. In both contests the winning team was behind for a considerable spasm, and the rooting of those who favored the Yellow Jackets and the Crimson the Yellow Jackets and the Crimson from sentimental or speculative reasons was at times fervid to a degree. This was particularly noticeable in the Tech-South Carolina contest when Tech surrendered the narrow 14-11 lead it enjoyed at the end of the first half, permitted the smaller Carolinians to overhaul them and started up at a scoreboard that remarked something like 22-19.

Tech yells began to ring forth. The populace demanded that the Jackets awaken from a lethargy that had apparently not only seized but throttled them. Tech responded, knotted the score and then pulled away as it pleased. The Carolinians seemed to realize that they had any realize the fact that they had ap-proached greatness, fallen short, and that a Pullman, north bound, would be comfortable.

Roane Is Star. In the Tech rally, the work of Baby Roane stood out resplendent, while Emort Jenks contributed a couple of Alabama was apparently suffering from its long layoff. The Crimson appeared sluggish, and though they outpassed Tennessee at all times, the Vols were taking long shots and getting away with some of them. In the next half, Carter, Stabler and McGauley began to cut loose with some of the work that has brought their team to the proud place it holds in 1922 basketball. Their attack completely bewildered Tennessee for a Almost immediately Tennessee recovered, though, and again took the lead, and it was not until the last few minutes that the game was definitely minutes that the game was definitely decided in favor of the Crimson. TECH 34.

SOUTH CAROLINA 23 Tech seemed to think South Carolina easy and fairly loafed through the first half with the little Carolinians actually playing better basketball than the North avenue artists. Vaughan, a little fellow with mustache and a band about his hair, dashed in and out, swiping the ball from Tech and generally making monkeys of the Jackets, while Belk was getting in some deadly goal shoot-

TEAM."

This game would give these teams the opportunity of settling their arguments as well as the state championship and would prove an added attraction to the close of the present collegiate tournament. Many basketball fans have never had the opportunity of seeing a real basketball game between two teams as evenly matched as these teams appear to be from available dope, and many fans have never seen the cage game played by members of the fairer sex. From a standpoint of interest, this game will rival the championship game that will follow immediately in the collegiate tournament.

Major League Training Starts BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.

Teams' Chances Are Discussed

New York, February 27.-The jous opposition from the Pirates who Giants are off for Santone, Tex., carried them along at a breathless pace until that momentous week late in August, 1921, when the Pirates

Before leaving the Browns, however, be it noted that they have acquired Dave Danforth, who worked wonders pitching for a tail-end club in the association last year. He might help greatly in 1922 as another good flinger would have helped them last Sox Experimenting.

The White Sox are still going through evolutionary processes after being cast back into the primitive by the wreck of their 1919 team. The Cubs have not been built up, although their owner, William J. Wrigley, is said to be willing to spend a million for a pennant. It is not easy to put a finger on any department of the primitive day that they sign up Erin Ward and the other holdouts, their position for a pennant. It is not easy to put a finger on any department of the countries of the last year when they might have been stronger. That is why the alleged marketing of Phil Douglas and Jess Barnes sounds so quaint at this time.

The Yankees still have quite a hold-out problem to contend with, but granted that they sign up Erin Ward and the other holdouts, their position for a pennant. It is not easy to put a finger on any department of the Giants in the National, was the team generally lacks that perfect co-ordination which made the Giants champions last fall.

The stronger teams of the city wishing to get in either the City league or the Spalding league are requested to have representatives present at 8 o'clock when the organization of these loops will be carried through.

BIG AUTO EVENTS POSTPONED TO SUNDAY

Los Angeles. Cal., February 27 .-The 250-mile automobile race started yesterday at the Beverly Hills speedway, but called off at the end of the 93d lap when a light rain made the course dangerous, will be held next Sunday afternoon, according to officials of the Los Angeles Speedway association, sponsors of the event.

Official re-check of the figures today showed the race had been called at the end of the 93d lap instead of during the 94th, as had been an-

of during the 94th, as had been announced previously.

The revised figures also credited Tommy Milton, who led the field of twelve entries throughout the afternoon, with having negotiated the 93 laps in 1 hour, 2 minutes, 53.08 seconds, for an average speed of 100.8 miles an hour.

The re-check also placed Harry Hartz in second and Joe Thomas in third position when the event was halted by the speedway management.

Johnson insisted.

"The question has been frequently asked during this campaign why it costs so much for the Associated Charities to give away a dollar," he added. "That question is a perfectly natural one, but it is prompted by a lack of knowledge of the true purpose of this agency. The Associated Charities is not organized primarily for relief. If it were, a dollar could be given away at a cost that was practically nil.

Chicago, February 27.—Wheat ran up in price to within 1-8 cent of $1.50 a bushel today, barely missing the height which for months has been the ambition of the bulls. Fresh signs of European need of breadstaffs gave the impetus, but the rise tempted heavy profit-taking sales and the market reacted closing unsettled at 1c net deprofit-taking sales and the market reacted, closing unsettled at 1c net decline to 1-4c advance, with May $1.47 to $1.47 3-8 and July $1.25 to $1.25 1-2. Corn finished 1-2 to 1c off; oats at a shade decline to 1-8@1-4c gain, and provisions up 15 to 40c.

At first wheat showed a scarcity of offerings and there was a decided jump in values, mainly because of sharply higher quotations at Liverpool. It was figured that taken in connection with an advance in sterling exchange the actual market price of wheat at Liverpool today was 6 1-2c a bushel higher in American money than was the case Saturday. As the price here, however, approached $1.50, the volume of selling broadened to an unusual exof selling broadened to an unusual extent and the demand became less urgent, causing prices to recede. Re-ports of snowstorms in the southwest, where moisture would be helpful to the winter crops, tended further to ease the market in the late dealings. A decrease of 814,000 bushels in the visible supply attracted but little atten-tion and appeared to have been fully discounted beforehand.

Corn and oats rose with wheat to new high price records for the season. On the other hand export call for corn was laggard and when wheat turned weak corn, too, gave way. There talk of export business in oats, no quantities were stated.

New High Cotton Prices Meet With Realizing

AMERICAN EXCHANGE. New York, February 27.—(Special.)—The ollowing were the rolling quotations on the American Cotton and Grain Exchange, Inc.,

New York, February 27.—Near months made new high ground for the present upward movement in the cot-ton market during today's early traduncertainty at the start as a result of realizing and scattered southern selling, but after opening unchanged to 5 points higher soon developed increasing strength and activity. The firmness of foreign exchange rates and reports of a good opening tone in the stock market encouraged an optimistic view of conditions abroad, based partly on reports that the proposed ten-year Europe truce was expected to react very favorably on general business.

This led to considerable scattered buying particularly as the news from the market for cotton goods continued favorable and Manchester reports were generally, encouraging.

March sold up to 18.76 and July to 17.71, making net advances of 15 to 26 points, but the south was a scattered seller, and realizing increased during the middle of the morning.

Offerings were well enough taken on a scale down to cause frequent bulges, but each of the latter met long cotton, and there were spurts of liquidation or realizing which sent March off to 18.35 and July to 17.31 during the afternoon or about 40 to 42 points from the best and 15 to 25 points net lower.

The selling then slackened and last prices were several points up from York, February 27.—Eight more brokerage firms, mostly out none having any connection with the New York Stock, and today. As has been the case ever since the move-up bucketshops started, today's developments had no ock market other than to put up prices. Becoming raid against bucketshops, many brokerage firms in buying in stocks for their customers, stocks which are been carrying all the time. These are days rs in the stock market to make sure that the nich they deal are members of the New York age firms that do not advertise the fact that New York Stock exchange are subject to laiming that they are being illegitimately eat is not true. on to the buying that has been going on by the bucket-has been steadily increasing speculative and investment in and out of Wall street, based on the sensational recovgn exchange and in the recovery from the recent low prices dollars in Liberty bonds and two billions in farm product The farmers are out of most everything and with higher prices neir products will again start in buying. Decidedly optimistic rts are being received here from the southern and western farming sections regarding the improvement in general sentiment.

Reliable bankers reported today that there were signs that the government was in the bond market buying third Liberty 41-4s for retirement. Today's bond market, especially for foreign government issues, was strong. T. W. Lamont, who does not talk just to hear the sound of his own voice, has just publicly stated that whereas it is commonly estimated that our investors own $5,000,000,000 of foreign government bonds brought out by bankers, the total of these bonds saued since the war started August 1, 1914, is $2,587,000,000, of which $1,770,000,000, or all but $818,000,000 have since been paid off. This was understood by well informed Wall street to forecast further issues of foreign bonds with the funds thus raised to be spent here. It is believed that Canada will be in this market for $100,000,000 in the Sinclair Oil.

Chicago is very bullish on Sinclair Oil. Rumors are being heard here that the company is planning to consolidate all of its floating debt through some new financing. But aside from the nearby season for increased demand for oil from automobiles, nothing definite could be learned here today to explain the strength in these shares. Unconfirmed reports were also heard that Standard Oil was again buying Sinclair.

been loafing on the job, last year's drastic reduction in expenses justifies the conclusion that much headway has been made in correcting that situation, and under such conditions it is fair to assume that with only 3.3 per cent earned on property account, there will be no drastic rate reductions ordered by the interstate commerce commission in its forthcoming decision.

Large Earnings.

also heard that Standard Oil was again buying Sinclair.

Consolidated Gas jumped 4 points to a new high record for the year at 98 1-2 on the belief that the supreme court would decide that the company had the right to charge more than 80 cents for gas. This stock sold only this January at 85:

When Studebaker was selling down in the 70's only a very short time ago the prediction was made in this column based on information obtained from trustworthy sources, that par would be reached this, year and possibly 125. From the same source it was learned today that the same mightly good buying is going on the Rock Island common on the belief that before the end of this year those shares, now selling slightly above 40, would sell at or near 70. The right people here are also bullish on a number of other railway shares, believing that the upward movement in the rails has only just started. that the upward movement in the rails has only just started.

Annual Report.

American Locomotive will issue its American Locomotive will issue its annual report within the next few days, showing roughly $13.50 earned for the common stock with net quick assets of $40,000,000, or almost as much as the common and preferred shares combined.

Baltimore and Ohio reports for January $14,269,000 gross, a decrease, compared with last year, of $3,586,000, but net operating income of $1,523,000, an increase of $617,000.

Today the interstate commerce commission began its last week of the hearings started last December to determine whether or not freight rates should be reduced. Towards the close of the week witnesses will be crosseramined and then there will be the final arguments from both sides, that is, by the railroads and the shippers, who have been asking for lower rates.

Early Decision.

It is believed that the case will be closed before the middle of March and that a final decision will be handed down within a few weeks. Figures published today show that the railroads for the calendar year 1921 earned on their property account 3.3 per cent, not including "other income," whereas the law passed two years ago intended 51-2 to 6 per cent to be earned, providing there had been proper management and conomical operation.

New York, February 27.—The successful sale of the new Dutch government 75,000,000 guilder offering in this market today was the foremost feature of another active, strong and diversified demand for bonds.

French government 7½s and 8s led the European list and Chinese railway 5s made the greatest gain of any issue, rising 4 points. Japanese governments and several continental municipals were trong.

In the domestic group rails of the speculative type were in further demand, but fractional to 1 point gains in that group were slightly shaded by the reversal in the stock market. Buying of Liberty bonds expanded, although several of those issues closed at slight losse. Local tractions, notably Brooklyn Transit 7s, registered substantial gains. Total sales, par value, aggregated $19,275,000.

gratifying. Aside from two much needed plants, the building of which have been approved by your board, we are properly and adequately equipped and manned to handle the business in the United States and Canada. Your board is carefully considering and shaping its foreign policy, and, as conditions appear to warrant, the business will expand by first fully occupying those fields closest home. We should be able to carry out this program of expansion with net legal rights of this company are being fully established and protected.

Statement to Stockholders.

President Candler submitted the following consolidated profit and loss statements to the stockholders.

In discussing the status of the company and some of its plans for the future, Mr. Candler said:

In spite of adverse business conditions in practically all lines, it will be noted that the net profit for the year amounted to nearly $4,000,000 before writing down inventories, after which it was over $2,750,000. This is equivalent to about $3,25 per share for the common capital stock after provision for preferred stock dividends, federal taxes and depreciation. The average profit per galion was 17.4 cents, as compared with 13.1 cents for 1920. With large bad debt losses in many lines, particularly in the south, we are glad to be able to report that ours have been less than one-tenth of 1 per cent of sales.

Although the company's good will is by far its most valuable asset, it will be noted with satisfaction that it is rapidity building up its tangible assets. More than $1,000.000 has been added to its net tangibles dwith satisfaction that it is rapidity building up its tangible assets. More than $1,000.000 has been added to its net tangible assets has now been increased to almost $7,000,000.

The outstanding schlevement of the year 1921 is the large reduction in notes payable to banks. By reference to the balance sheet it will be noted that this indebtedness has been reduced from $8,500,000 to $2,100,000. a net reduction for the year of a little more than $6,400,000. The interest alone on this indebtedness amounted to sufficient to pay a common stock dividend of $1 per share. Tures items of extraordinary expense, which were necessary expenses incident to conditions peculiar to 1921: It is well to call your much less for 1922. It is well to call your much less for 1922. It is well to call your matention to the fact that while the cash on hand shows a considerable decrease, this is practically accounted for in, the increase of accounts receivable:

Wall Street Spring House-Cleaning Continues Monday

BY SIDNEY B. WHIPPLE,

United News Staff Correspondent.

New York, February 27.—The New York financial district is proceeding with its spring housecleaning. Six more brokerage firms were swept into the debris that has been accumulating on unsound finance. ing begun two months ago.

Five of the failures of Monday were distinctly New York firms.

One was in Philadelphia, resulting from previous collapses of firms with which the Quaker City brokers were associated.

For those statistically inclined, the following table tells the story of the month—Black February, it is called: Failures in four weeks—21. Total since December 30—35. Liabilities of 35 bankrupt concerns $30,000,000. Assets of bankrupts,

Monday's suspensions were: Mosher & Wallace, 33 Broadway; Thomas H. Cowley & Co., 135 Broadway; Gamble & Yates, 82 Broad street; A. R. Smith & Co., 42 Broadway; Shewry & Falkland (suspended from membership in the Consolidated exchange); and P. K.
Guthrie, of Philadelphia.

Financial difficulties have also spread to Canada, as was shown the suppression of Towark Hart & Anderson in Montreel in the suspension of Tousaw, Hart & Anderson, in Montreal.

While the usual announcements of these failures were being made.

in the street, the grand jury investigation of the complaints of shorn lambs, who are now volunteering to tell the story of their shearing by the hundreds, was continued. Arrests on twenty indictments already returned by the grand jury have been slow. Up to the present time only three former brokers have voluntarily appeared to answer to the charges. They are now in .... the Tombs, under heavy ball. Other indicted brokers left New York hurriedly—some of them even before the investigation began—and are being sought on bench warrants.

Among those indicted are several, it is said, who know absolutely nothing about finance, but who have been connected with get-richquick swindles for years. Some of them never bought a share of stock, it is alleged, merely inducing their clients to "invest" their money and then departing without a trace when demands for an accounting came too pressing.

Alfred A. Lindsay, a "bond broker," accused of swindling Mrs. Lillian B. Duke, Mrs. W. H. Arnold, and other wealthy women out of three-quarters of a million dollars, was indicted for fraud Monday afternoon. One of the women complainants, Mrs. Dorothy Atwood, became hysterical when she testified that she gave Lindsay her entire fortune, nearly $200,000, and received nothing for it.

Netherlands Bonds. Price on the 75,000,000 guilders Kingdon of the Netherlands Fifty-Year 6 per cent

Price on the 75,000,000 guilders Kingdom of the Netherianus Fifty-Year 6 per cent Loan, which is to be effected for public subscription today, was announced on Saturday as $940 per bond of 2,500 guilders. At this price the yield to maturity, based on an exchange rate of 38.5 cents per guilder, is 6.15 per cent. The bonds are moncaliable for ten years, and in 1932 can be called at par; if such redemption should take place at that time the return on the investment at the rate of 38.5 cents per guilder would be 6.30 per cent. With the return of exchange to the par of 40.2 cents within six months, the yield to earliest daté of redemption is about 6.90 per cent, and to maturity over 6.40 per cent.

When this issue is listed on the New York stock exchange it, will be one of the few loans expressed in terms of foreign currency dealt in on that exchange. The loan is the first to be offered since before the world war having an international character, i. e., offered and dealt in in more than one market. Previous loans which were sold and have since been actively traded in in-various financial centers, are the City of Tokico 5s, which, in 1912, were offered simultaneously in New York, London and Paris, and an international ioan to the Chinese Company Traders Rallways, which were offered concurrently in London, Paris, Berli: and New York.

Although no statement was forthcoming from the offices of Dillon, Read & Co., the bankers at the head of the offering group, it was understood in the financial district that they had been awamped with applications for syndicate participations. The trend toward the rails was plainly emphasized by the flevelopments last week, when pools at last succeeded in making definite progress in marking up their specialties. The move in the medium-priced rails is wholly speculative, and those stocks which have been most prominent are those which have been most prominent are those whas earnings in 1921 were relatively satisfactor, and promising, when measured by the expec-tation of a return to more normal operating conditions.

The rails is which there is the greatest speculative interest include Missouri Pacific, Rock Island, Pere Marquette, San Francisco, Southern Railway, and Baitimore & Ohio, the last named showed definite signs of good speculative buying Friday and Saturday.

The actually wesk stocks are the Independent steels and Retail Stores. The suspension of dividends upon Republic Steel & Iron, preferred, taken alone cannot cantinue to have a decided effect upon prices, but as regards the steel stocks like Crucble, there is fear that at the next meeting of directors dividends upon the common will be suspended.

TRI-STATE PIGGLY WIGGLY COMPANY,
By EDWIN STERNE, its President.

The borrowing demand for Baldwin continues and as fast as one short position is covered, another one seems to be created. We believe that even at these Ivis Baldwin is not a promising short sale.

Traders were obviously impaired with the belief that the market and gone too fast this morning and that, therefore, the list was due for some setback, although there is little or he apprehension that the market is facing a substantial break.

Prailure of the supreme coult to hand down a decision in tae Rending case brought on a little selling of coal road stocks which must have been purely professional, and could have had no relation to the relative values of the shares. As a matter of fact, we believe that the rails are a purchase every time they sell off a little. Car loadings are increasing and January earnings statements, so far published, are satisfactory. In so, far as net earnings are concerned. Tebruary statements should be still better. The pressure on independent steels was not quite as aggressive, big short interest has been built up in Bethlehem Steel, and also in Baldwin.

It may be that the general list will sell down a bit from present levels, but we would buy the rails, the equipments and the oils.

"Lombardi, Ltd.," is a play one will remember a long time when a capable cast is used in its production. Carrillo is a wonder in "Lombardi, Ltd.," but much of his art would be lost, certainly its effectiveness, if he were not supported by a strong cast. But he is, and therefore "Lombardi, Ltd.," is a play one can afford to spend time on. Carrillo is perfectly cast in the role of the costumer whose art is everything and to whom finances are nothing. A false affection does the rest. There are tears, self-satisfied tears, the footlights at the Lyric theater the first half of this week.

Attempt to Defraud

(At the Criterion.)

An epic tale of surging passion sweeping from the wide plains of the Argentine through the fascinating frivolities of pre-war Paris into the blazing turmoil of the German invasion of northern France was unfolded Monday at the Criterion theater. It was the showing of "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," the $1,000,000 Rex Ingram production made for Metro, which has been the screen sensation of New York, Chicago, Boston, Pittsburg, Detroit and Loangles. The picture, adapted by June Mathis from the great novel of Vicente Blasco Ibanez, has intensified the dramatic force of the original story and last night it held the spectators breathlessly intent as with swift, sure strokes it hammered home the terror and grandeur of the war—and a great deal of the humor and light-hearted gaiety that kept bubbling up through the turgid stream of struggling humanity when the world was in arms.

Washington, February 27.—Charles W.
